Landfall ■ Midsummer 2010

Without a doubt, the sun is protective, healing, empowering, revitalizing, and inspiring. Celebrating the renewal of the sun at the Midsummer Solstice includes high-spirited merriment and lighthearted bewitchment. Our smiles deepen, our laughter increases, our hearts open, our personal dreams are renewed. Moments we once thought ordinary now seem infused with grace. The shortest night and the longest day of the year – when nature comes to life and dreams can come true. A time of miracles and — magic!

Magic is a basic instinct. Magic is natural. It is a harmonious movement of energies to create needed change. However, to believe in magic as a viable way of enhancing our quality of life requires a leap of faith. We must see life in slightly romantic terms. Imagination merges with belief; the magic of balance, of alignment, of everything coming together in just the right way.

Living at the water's edge is an almost universal desire. It is different – where two worlds meet; a little piece of infinity. Magic...

Linger in the twilight of a June day. Wink at the moon. Believe in Midsummer magic.

IT'S A FACT

The solstice arrives on June 21st with the full moon following shortly thereafter. The exceptional bright and colorful June full moon, known as the Strawberry Moon, follows the lowest path across the sky of all full moons and will appear to be much larger than normal taking on a pink/orange hue. The full moon names originated with the Native Americans as a means for them to track the seasons — the Strawberry Moon being a celebration of the strawberry harvest.

■ DEVONSHIRE CREAM

1 ½ lbs. cream cheese
1 ¾ c. powdered sugar
1 c. sour cream
2 oz. Grand Marnier
1 c. whipped cream

Beat together cream cheese and powdered sugar until smooth. Add sour cream and Grand Marnier; beat well. Fold whipped cream into cream cheese mixture. Keep refrigerated. This is best served in a clear glass bowl with a basket of fresh whole strawberries for dipping.
